DEATH OF CHARLES G. OSGOOD.

One of the Last Survivors of Wellsboro's Old Time Business Men.

Charles G. Osgood, aged 88, one of the last survivors among Tioga county's old time business men, died at his home on Central avenue last Wednesday night. He had been an invalid for two years and confined to his bed since December. He was born in Cortland county, N Y., and located in this county about 60 years ago. For years from 1840 to 1890, he was engaged in lumbering operations on Pine Creek besides the general store business here. His life was identified with the interests of this community.

For over half a century he had been a devoted and faithful member of the church and served as elder, trustee and treasurer. He was also superintendent of the Sunday-school for over thirty years. Mr. Osgood was a conscientious Christian gentleman and was well liked both as a citizen and a business man. He was first elected Burgess of Wellsboro in 1855 and served in that office till 1860. In 1891 he was again elected Burgess, and at about the time of his retirement from business he performed good service as a member of the School Board.

Besides his widow the deceased is survived by one daughter and two sons Mrs C W. Webb and Harry Osgood, of Williamsport, and Prof Charles Osgood, of the faculty of Yale College.

Funeral services were held at the home on Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock, Rev. A. C. Shaw, D D, officiating.

Black--Short Nuptials.

WELLSBORO, April 1.—Miss Fannie R Black and James B Short, both of Wellsboro, were married Wednesday evening at the home of the bride's parents, Mr and Mrs William Black. Rev C G Langford officiated in the presence of about 25 guests. The bridal party entered the parlor to the strains played by Miss Grace Black, cousin of the bride. The bride and groom were attended by Miss Anna Black, sister of the bride, and Edward Randall, of Clymer.

Following the wedding a supper was served under the direction of Mrs Bert Black assisted by Misses Sarah and Mary Randall, Edward Addie Black as waiters. The feast music was furnished by an orchestra composed of Messrs and Farnham Black and Maynard Short. Vocal selections were also rendered by Mr Russell of Sayre.

The wedding gifts were numerous and beautiful, consisting principally of china and linen.

Among those in attendance from out of town were Miss Rose Randall and Mrs Thomas Persett, of Mrs Frank Howard, of Covington. Miss Sarah Randall and Messrs William and Edward Randall of Clymer and Sylvester Russell, of Sayre.

Fireman Fatally Injured at Junction

Wilson Reisea, a fireman on the Central, was fatally injured at the Junction last Wednesday night about 8 30 o'clock. His train was standing on a siding and he got down from the engine to clean the fire box when he was struck on the back of the head by a pipe in the hand of a track pusher engine which was backing down the main track.

The injured man was brought to this station and was attended by Drs Longwell and Shaw. It was found that his skull was fractured and his body badly cut in several places. A special was made up and Reisea was accompanied by Dr Longwell who took to the Corning Hospital where he died at 1 o'clock Friday morning without regaining consciousness.

American Society of Equity

CROOKED CREEK, April 1.—The warm sugar social recently held at the home of John Irwin on Hills Creek, under the auspices of the American Society of Equity, was a decided success. The receipts were $17. Proceeds will be used in furthering the work in this locality.

The Ladies' Aid society will meet next week with Mrs Frank Bentley.

Mrs Ella Bailey is visiting friends in Williamsport this week.

In Favor of Local Option

To the Democratic Electors of Tioga county—Inasmuch as I am a candidate for nomination at the coming primaries for [illegible] I feel that I am in favor of local option.

The Republicans are divided on this question, and, it may be, that some in our own party are not in favor of the proposition. If this be the case, I desire them to be advised of my position before they vote in the primaries.

A word more. Those who say that they are in favor of local option are merely saying that they are in favor of the decentralization of governmental power. This is a fundamental principle of liberty. It is a basic principle of Democracy. It was for this that Jefferson bent his brows and Washington drew his sword.

President Bars a Newspaper.

Washington, March 25.—President Roosevelt has ordered the Post Office Department to stop the distribution of La Questione Sociale, the inflammatory Paterson, N. J., newspaper. He has asked the Department of Justice to show him a way to prosecute the editors criminally and to advise him how far he can go in a recommendation to Congress toward the suppression of all such papers. [illegible] however, is that the bride's parish [illegible] be the proper place for the ceremony, and because of this it is very probable that the ducal marriage will take place in the United States.

Orchard Sentenced to Die.

Caldwell, Idaho, March 20.—Harry Orchard has been sentenced by Judge Fremont Wood to be hanged on May 15. Declaring that he believed that Harry Orchard in his testimony in the trials of William D. [illegible] Steunenberger told the exact truth, attempting to conceal nothing, Judge Wood in [illegible] District Court, recommended that the State Board of Pardons commute Orchard's sentence of [illegible] imprisonment in the State penitentiary. The sentence of death was pronounced in accordance with the plea of guilty entered by Orchard when arraigned.

Chinese Indignant at Japan.

Canton, March 24.—The greatest indignation prevails here against the government for yielding to the Japanese demands in the Tatsu Maru case. It being considered that the Government's action in this matter has brought disgrace upon this prov[illegible] of Canton has organized several big indignation meetings, at which resolutions were adopted that the anniversary of the release of the Tatsu Maru be observed as a day of public mourning. The resolution also declared a boycott against Japanese goods.

Prince De Sagan Here.

Philadelphia, March 25.—Doubt as to whether Prince Helle de Sagan, suitor for the hand of Mme. Anna Gould, was in this country, was dispelled, when the Prince was recognized in the Hotel Bellevue-Stratford by persons who had known him in Paris. The Prince came here after his flight from New York and registered in the hotel as Bertrand Dufresne of Paris. Prince de Sagan denied his identity [illegible] ed he was Dufresne, a French merchant. He refused, however, to show his [illegible]

Gates to Compete with Paper Trust.

Port Arthur, Tex., March 24.—John W. Gates announces that he will erect a paper mill to compete with the Paper Mill Trust. He has also arranged to establish a big cotton seed oil mill. He says that he has raised three-quarters of a million dollars in New York to aid in building the proposed Port Arthur and Houston Short Line Railroad, and he has added a quarter of a million dollars to this sum, making $1,000,000 now ready for the purpose.

WANTED

I WANT TO HEAR FROM OWNER HAVING

for sale, any size and any location. [illegible] tion. If you want cash for your farm or business it will pay you to write me to-day. I only want to hear from owners who are willing to sell direct to buyer and without paying a cent of commission to any one. I am [illegible] estate agent and I don't accept properties for sale on a commission business. Agents need not answer. If your farm or business is for sale write me at once and I will send you free full details of my new plan of putting you in touch with hundreds of people anxious to buy. I must hear from you quickly, as I have more buyers than I have properties to recommend. It costs you nothing to write to me and I may have someone who wants your place and will pay your full price. In writing give price and description and state how soon possession [illegible] L. DARBYSHIRE, Drawer 984, Rochester, N. Y.

COMMONER COMMENTS

MR. BRYAN'S ADDRESS AT SPRINGFIELD, ILL.

REVIEWS HIS CONNECTION WITH DEMOCRATIC PARTY.

Charges of Attempted Dictatorship Refuted—Will Be Candidate Only in Answer to Call from the United Party.

At Springfield, Ill., February 21, [illegible] state rally. Mr. Bryan was invited to address the [illegible]

"I appreciate the honor Mr. Steven[illegible] makes in accepting the position of president of the Federation of Bryan [illegible] will [illegible] confidence which you manifest at this season of the year to prepare for the [illegible] you have declared yourselves in favor of my nomination, I can speak to you frankly and in a personal way. I have been called a dictator and [illegible] you can testify that no one has been less a dictator. I have no inclination to dictate and no power to dictate, even if I wished to do so. I have had no patronage with which to [illegible] you, no money with which to hire you, and no corporate power, believe me, with which to terrorize you. I was nominated at Chicago in 1896 without any organization or literary bureau to bring me to the attention of the delegates. I was renominated by unanimous vote in 1900, after those who had helped to defeat me in 1896 had spent four years in trying to drive me out of politics. Immediately after the election of 1900 I announced [illegible] I would not be a candidate in [illegible] I made this announcement then so that the party might test the truth of the charge that my radicalism had defeated the party. I did not try to pick out a candidate or force any [illegible] on the party. I opposed Mr. [illegible] fused to discuss the issues and concealed his views on public questions. I went to the St. Louis convention from a sense of duty, feeling that I owed it to those who had voted [illegible] to do what I could to secure a platform that would not sacrifice the principles for which the party had been fighting. I fared better than I expected, and we do not have to apologize for the platform of that year. When Mr. Parker was nominated I went out and did what I could for him. His platform committed him to [illegible] reforms, while the Republican platform did not promise anything. I worked for him as hard as I could have worked for myself, and plead for him as earnestly as I could have plead for a candidate of my choice.

[illegible] support of me supported him, but when the vote was counted it was found that his vote was about a million and a quarter short of that of 1900. His vote fell off in the east and south as well as in the west—in only two states, I believe, did his [illegible] 1900.

It was evident the day after the election that the Democratic party would be again a positive, aggressive, reform force. The reaction immediate[illegible] the [illegible] try again, and my renomination was [illegible]

In 1906 when I was out of the country and not in correspondence [illegible] any one, about half the state conventions indorsed me. I appreciated the compliment, but I waited more than a year to see if anyone would appear upon whom the party could center with better prospects of success. Finally, last November, in order to put an end to misconstructions of my silence and misrepresentations of my intention, I announced that I would be a candidate if the Democrats desired it. [illegible] party if it summoned me and would [illegible] and no matter whom the Republicans [illegible] er the chances favored victory or defeat. This is my position to-day.

If I have retained your confidence it is because I have spoken from my heart to your hearts and have cherished the same ideals that you have cherished.

[illegible] the nomination to come from the voters rather than from the convention. The convention is but the servant of the voters—the voters are the masters. They have a right to determine both the platform and the candidates. If you want me nominated, instruct for me. Instructions are democratic. No one has any right to represent others unless they want him to represent them.

I believe in instruction. I do not care upon whom your choice falls. Whoever he is he should have delegates instructed by the people who elected them. They should represent the wishes of the people.

If I am to be your candidate I want your delegates instructed for me. If I am your candidate again it will be in answer to a call from the party and upon that condition only will I be a candidate. If the voters of the party want me for their candidate they will instruct their delegates to that effect.

And there is more needed than instructions. The delegates should be men who are willing to be instructed. They should be men who will carry out the instructions which the people give them.

I do not want delegates [illegible] for me, but [illegible] who will [illegible] at the convention [illegible] that they would like to be free [illegible] in order [illegible] when they were instructed [illegible] I am perfectly willing to fight all the enemies that can get in front of me, but my enemies shall not get behind me [illegible]. I say this of any. If, but it is [illegible] for any candidate [illegible] those who prefer me should not ask to be a part of the convention which nominates him. The delegates should act as the representatives of the people, and they should be men who are willing to do what they have been instructed to do. If you want me to be your candidate, let no man who does not wish to see me nominated represent you in the convention [illegible] man have a [illegible] want to see me elected if nominated. Let the candidate who has the support of the people have the heart as well as the voice of the delegates. And again, if I am nominated, it will come at the end of 12 years of fighting in the open. My views are known to all the people. They have been openly voiced and I have a right to assume that the people who nominate me will give me the kind of platform on which I can stand and fight. I have the [illegible] the platform of the party will be [illegible] honest fight in the open for the principles for which the people [illegible] evasion. [illegible] If I am nominated [illegible] a platform upon which I can stand and fight. I have a right to assume that the party will place the management of the campaign in the hands of men who want to see me elected. I have the right to assume that the committee in charge of the campaign will be willing to devote their [illegible] to winning a victory. In 1896 I [illegible] a campaign when some members of the committee would not attend my meetings. I shall not make another campaign with bushwhackers in the organization. If I am nominated there will not be any misunderstanding as to the kind of fight I shall make. The views I stand for and the kind of a fight I make are too well known for there to be any doubt. Those who do not want that kind of a fight do not want me nominated. They do not want [illegible] not want me elected they should give their support to another candidate. If they are not for the [illegible] of a fight I shall [illegible] they must [illegible] and the [illegible] If I am nominated it will be because the people are for the principles for which I stand, and not because they are for me personally. I am not vain enough to believe that six and a half million of voters will turn out and work in [illegible] to satisfy my personal ambitions. You are interested in me because you are interested in yourselves, because you are interested in your children and your children's children. You are interested in me because I believe in the kind of government you love. I would rather be the leader of six and a half million Democrats who think for themselves and [illegible] march in the direction in which they want me to march, than be the [illegible] of six and a half millions without thoughts who would simply echo what some one else said.

The Democrats have been thinking for themselves and they have been [illegible] standpoint of the many. They have been considering the rights of all the people rather than the privileges of a few. There is no doubt that a large majority of the people believe in Democratic principles and are ready to try the policies that our party has been advocating. The nation's conscience is awakened; let us appeal to it with an honest platform; with an honest organization and with honest methods, and our appeal will not be in vain.

Would He Remit the Fine?

Gov. [illegible] holders. He [illegible] imprisonment [illegible] for Mr. Rockefeller has not been imprisoned [illegible] in view of the fact that Chancellor Day is for Gov. Hughes and in view of the further fact that the younger Rockefeller has declared for Gov. Hughes, the question arises would Gov. Hughes limit the $29,000,000 fine if he were president? This may become a pertinent question —how will Gov. [illegible] he remit the fine?

Whose Judge?

The pictorial paper, Judge, has a well defined political policy and this policy is clearly plutocratic. The paper attacks remedial legislation and those who favor it, and uses the power of the picture to libel its political opponents and misrepresent their issues.

Whose Judge?

Who owns the paper?

What will control the policy?

Would it not be a good thing for Judge to give its readers [illegible] representing the men in the other as Punch and Judy, standing in the background and the ventriloquist [illegible] the voice and utters the [illegible]?

Whose Judge and what is he using Judge for?

The Girl from Tim's Place

By CHARLES CLARK MUNN

COPYRIGHT, 1906, BY LOTHROP, LEE & SHEPARD CO.

SYNOPSIS.

Chip McGuire, a 16-year-old girl living at Tim's place in the Maine woods is sold by her father to Pete Bolduc, a [illegible]

When camp is broken Chip and Ray occupy same canoe. The party reach camp of Mrs. Frisbie's father and are welcomed by him and Cy Walker, an old [illegible] and former townsman of the hermit. They settle down for summer's stay. Chip and Ray are in love, [illegible] one realizes this but Cy Walker. Strange canoe marks found on lake shore in front of their cabin. Strange smoke [illegible] across the lake. Martin and Levi leave for settlement to get officers to arrest McGuire, who is known as outlaw who escaped murderer. Chip's one woods friend, Tomah, an Indian, visits camp. Ray believes he sees a bear on the ridge. Chip is stolen by Pete Bolduc and escapes with her in a canoe. Chip is res[illegible] Old Cy and Ray discover strange tracks in the wilderness. They penetrate further into the wilderness and discover the hiding place of the man who had been sneaking about their cabin.

Then came another surprise, for suddenly Old Cy caught sight of a man just emerging from behind a rock fully ten rods from the [illegible] shore. He stooped, lifted a canoe into view, and [illegible] to the [illegible] said [illegible] the water [illegible] to the rock, picked up a rifle, then pushed the canoe off and crossed the lake, vanished into the smoke.

The two watchers on the ridge exchanged glances.

"He's goin' to tend his traps an' maybe cum," Old Cy said at last. [illegible] led the way back to their [illegible] shack. Here he [illegible] one hand [illegible] his [illegible] listened [illegible] the sound the [illegible] something [illegible] slightly, then a [illegible] and then less [illegible] the sound ceased.

"The [illegible] he added, now [illegible] with his [illegible] den."

A hurried gathering of their few belongings was made. [illegible] shoved into the lagoon, and no time was lost until the lake was crossed and they drew along side of where the smoke was still rising in a thin film. No landing was possible here, for the shore was a sheer face of upright slate, and only where this lone trap[illegible] make one.

From here a series of [illegible] slate [illegible] and between them and parallel to the shore, narrow, irregular passages partially closed by broken rock. It was all of slaty formation, jagged, serrated and gray with moss.

Following one of [illegible] Cy and Ray came to the ledge out of which the smoke was rising from a crevasse. It was a little lower than one in front, perhaps 40 feet in breadth, double that in length, and of a more even surface. At each end was a short transverse passage hardly wide enough to walk in, and a few feet deep.

And now, after a more careful examination of the crevasse out of which the thin film of smoke rose, Old Cy began a search. Up and down each narrow passway he turned and [illegible]ed, but nowhere was a crack or cranny to be found in their walls. In places they were as high as his head, sheer faces of slate, then broken, [illegible]rated, moss-coated, or of yellow [illegible] color. Here and there a stunted spruce had taken root in some crack, and over, back from the rim of this green enclosure began and [illegible] also, in a sunny nook below this belting tangle of scrub spruce, were ample signs of a trapper's occupation in the way of pelts stretched upon forked sticks and hanging from a cord crossing this niche. They were of the usual species found in this wilderness—a otter, muskrat, with a few mink and [illegible] skins.

Another sign of human presence was a [illegible] ax marks, with [illegible] all else it was [illegible]

Some [illegible] Cy speculated, standing in the [illegible] "I've a notion we'd more [illegible] to [illegible] a [illegible]

His face was growing more and more uneasy each moment [illegible] had hunted [illegible] of slate [illegible] film of smoke. He had [illegible] watched the lake [illegible]

"I don't think we'd [illegible] much longer," he said at last. "We can't tell how soon that man may [illegible]"

[illegible] said the second [illegible] and after one more look at the [illegible] crack out of which the [illegible]

THE PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE

Tells Congress Anti-Trust Law Should Be Amended to Insure Rights.

President Roosevelt last Wednesday sent a message to Congress, urging [illegible] on several lines, especially concerning the railroads. [illegible] law. The President said in his communication to say some some things favorable to the working men.

In opening the President said:

"I call your attention to certain measures as to which I think there should be action by the Congress before the close of the present session. There is ample time for their consideration. [illegible] all of the matters bills have been introduced into one or the other of the two Houses, and it is too much to hope that action will be taken on one or the other on these bills at the present session. In my message at the opening of the present session, and, indeed, in various messages to previous Congresses, I have repeatedly suggested action on most of these measures.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT.

This is what the President in his message urges Congress to do:

Modify the Anti-Trust Law so that combinations of corporations can enter into contracts and agreements—now considered as in restraint of trade—on the approval of such contracts and agreements by the Secretary [illegible]

[illegible] to combine and contract with one another and with their employes.

Johnson Willing to be Nominated.

John A. Johnson of Minnesota, has made a specific declaration that while he had done nothing and will do nothing toward procuring for himself the Democratic nomination for President, he will not refuse the honor if it is tendered him. The Governor made this statement in a letter to Swan J. Turnblad, publisher of the Minneapolis Swedish-American Post, who had asked for a declaration on the subject.

GILLETTE ELECTROCUTED.

Man Admits Girl's Murder Before Going to Chair

Auburn, March 30.—Confessing that no legal mistake was being made in putting him to death, Chester Gillette explated the murder of Grace Brown in the death chair in Auburn prison. It required only one minute of an electric current of 1,700 volts to extinguish the life of the man who killed the girl who had trusted him.

Before entering the death house Gillette confessed to the Rev. Hedley Fitton and to the Rev. Coombs Hetrick, chaplain of the prison, that he had murdered Grace Brown. He told of all the circumstances preceding and following the killing, and he also authorized the clergymen to make public his confession after his death. The clergymen, however, decided not to reveal what Gillette had told them, and after his death they gave out the following signed statement:

"Because our relationship to Chester Gillette was privileged, we do not deem it wise to make a detailed statement, and simply wish to say that no legal mistake was made in his electrocution."

CONGRESSMAN SHOOTS NEGRO.

Heflin of Alabama Asked Him to Stop Drinking and Was Insulted.

Washington, April 1.—On his way to deliver a temperance lecture in the Metropolitan Methodist Episcopal Church, James Thomas Heflin, Representative in Congress for the Fifth district, Alabama, became engaged in a desperate fight with a negro on a Pennsylvania avenue car here and wound up by shooting the negro in the head and accidentally shooting Thomas McCreary, a horse trainer of New York, in the leg. Heflin threw the negro from the car and fired at him through the window. The first bullet struck McCreary who had alighted with his wife from the car and was almost at the sidewalk. The second bullet entered the negros head above the right ear, and physicians at the Emergency Hospital believe he cannot recover. The negro is Thomas Lumby, a laborer, and the fight arose because Heflin [illegible] drinking whiskey which the man had in a bottle. Heflin was arrested and released in $5,000 bail.

No Prosecution Now.

Washington, April 1.—The Government will not prosecute railroads for failure to comply with the "commodity clause" of the railroad law, pending a decision of the Supreme Court. The President has accordingly directed the Department of Justice to bring a test case as soon as possible [illegible] when the law [illegible] road to transport any articles or commodity other than timber, manufactured, mined, or produced by such road, or in which it is directly or in-[illegible]

ECONOMY CARRIED TOO FAR.

d Man's Thrift That Led Him Into Ridiculous Action.

President J. G. Schurman of Cornell is discussing elective college courses, of which in the freshman and sophomore years [illegible]

"A freshman of 16 or 17," said President Schurman, "is too young to choose for himself the courses best for him. His mind is not mature enough. It will make mistakes.

"In its immaturity, its proneness to error, it is like the mind of an old man in my native Freetown. He, though old, was mentally undeveloped, and saw nothing wrong or ridiculous in a piece of economy that he put in practice in the cemetery.

"The old man had lost four wives, and desired to erect for each a headstone, with an inscription commemorative of her wifely virtues.

"But inscriptions, he found, were very expensive. He economized in this way:

"He had the Christian name of each wife cut on a small stone above her grave—"Emma," "Mary," "Hester," "Edith." Under each name a hand pointed to a large stone in the center of the lot, and under each hand were the words:

"'For epitaph see large stone.'"

OLD GENTLEMAN NOT PLEASED.

Letter's Inscription Certainly the Reverse of Flattering.

In the English club at Hongkong a white-haired old gentleman, who had come down from some northern port, was seated at dinner when he suddenly became very excited. He had been brought a letter by a solemn-faced Chinese butler, and he saw something on the outside of this letter which sent him downstairs two steps at a time to interview the hall porter. When he came back he told us what was the matter. The hall porter had inscribed on the envelope, in chalks, for the information of the butler:

"This is for the old baboon with white fur."

Such a Clever Waiter.

Two gentlemen dining in a New York restaurant were surprised to find on the bill-of-fare the item, "green bluefish."

"Waiter," one asked, "what sort of fish are green bluefish?"

"Pretty [illegible]" said the waiter, offhand.

"Nonsense," said the man. "You know well enough that they do not take bluefish at this season."

The waiter came up and looked at the disputed item.

"Oh, that, sir," he said, with an air of enlightenment, "that's a hot-house bluefish, sir."—Youth's Companion.

To Save Trouble.

A Connecticut man tells of two Irishmen from Boston who, while driving through the state noticed that many of the barns had weathervanes in the shape of hens roosters.

"Dennis," said one Irishman to the other, "can ye tell me why they always have a rooster an' niver a hin on the top of thim barns?"

"Sure," replied Dennis, "its because of the difficulty they'd have in collecting the eggs."

A CONVENIENT FEEDING-RACK.

One Which Can Be Easily Built in the Stock Shed.

Inclosed is a sketch of my feeding rack, which I use in a shed about 30 feet long. I find this a very handy and economical rack in all ways. The foundation of this rack, you will see, is the bottom beam of my shed. The rack is three by six inches high. It is high enough that the cattle must take their feed from through the spaces and not over.

I took a scantling, 2x4 placed it cornerwise, thereby giving a straight edge from side of scantling to beam, giving me this straight edge on which to nail my boards: spiked this scantling solid in place and stayed it to the wall, in center. Next, I took boards five inches wide and placed them along the rack, running them from beam to scantling, six inches apart. Through this space cattle take their feed.

Any straw or food which falls on the [illegible] or scattered can be gathered up for bedding, or even replaced in rack again; thus one has no waste. This rack is a model [illegible] me the [illegible] of satisfaction. I trust I have made this plain enough to be understood, and that it may be a benefit to others.—Samuel Nesbitt, in the Farmers' Advocate, Canada.

What It Will Do to Restore Moisture in the Soil.

We often see, even in scientific treatises of the subject, the recommendation made to cultivate the surface of the soil in order to keep the moisture in. But, thanks to the wisdom of God, keeping the moisture in the ground is impossible. The free circulation of air and water is as necessary to fertile soil as the circulation of air and blood is essential to the [illegible] of the body in order to keep plenty of blood in the heart would hardly do; and if it were possible to seal up the earth's surface so that its vapors could not get out it would be as dead as the barren rock.

In well-kept, cultivated fields there is a layer of five or six feet of earth which is holding in deposit the surplus rainfall. The moisture of this body of earth is being continually carried towards the surface by capillary attraction, and as [illegible] takes place. The vaporized moisture is immensely increased in volume and so is expelled from the ground; and the soil in which this change from water to vapor occurs is thereby cooled. If the soil is properly cultivated this vapor passes out evenly and cools the whole layer of soil under the cultivated surface mulch. But if the ground has been allowed to bake it cracks, and the escaping vapor is of little service to the soil.

Now, we have another great fact to consider, continues the writer in the Farmers' Mail and Breeze. The winds that blow from the ocean are laden with all the moisture they can carry. When this moist air comes in contact with anything cooler it deposits a part of its load. It may be a cold wave of air meets this warm moist current, causing it to condense its vapor, which falls in drops of rain; or this moist air may come in contact with a soil cooled by evaporation of stored water. And herein is the secret of the wonderful success of scientific culture.

Mr. Campbell has taught us how to set a trap to catch this moisture that flows in a great aerial river over the plains of western Kansas and eastern Colorado. Enough water is flowing all summer from the sea toward the mountains to give us deep cultivation from Denver to the gulf if it could all be held into the channel.

So with this great volume of air laden with moisture and nitrogen and probably also with electric and other vitalizing elements contributed by the sunlight through which it has passed all our plantations the gulf and fruit growers [illegible] This process goes on night and day.

Now, changes occur rapidly. The air becomes cooler and lighter and the soil moister and warmer, and when the [illegible] the temperature of the ground in well cultivated fields the moist soil long just below the surface is warmer at sunrise than at noon. There is [illegible] and more [illegible]

EASY WHEN YOU KNOW HOW.

An Improved Way for the Making of Mush for Stock.

It pays to cook feed for some kinds of stock and especially shoats and hogs. The old way of trying to make fine cornmeal into mush, by stirring [illegible] water is boiling so it will not be lumpy, is a very tedious and tiresome way. To also try to pour in any quantity of meal at a time and stir it up to a smooth, even product is about out of the question.

We accidentally found out a better way than either of the above, says the Epitomist, and can now make ten gallons or 60 gallons at a time and never have a lump in it and this is how it is done:

Let the water come to a brisk boiling point and it is ready for the meal, which ought to be, for the best results, made very fine. For a soft mush that will run in a trough, use six quarts of meal for each ten gallons of water. The secret is this: put enough cool or cold water into the meal before it is poured into the kettle or caldron of hot water, to make it onto a moderately stiff batter, or just so it will run. Pour this into the boiling water all at once or as fast as is desired. Stir it about for a moment and it will all separate and no two particles of the meal will remain together and the result is a very smooth article of mush. No lumps whatever and it will not settle on the bottom of the kettle. It will very soon swell and thicken and become cooked enough in a short time after the water begins to boil again, to be ready for use. Of course it has to cool off before feeding, but no one after the wet meal is placed in the hot water has to remain to stir the contents of the kettle.

A bushel of very finely ground corn will make by this process, twice as much mush of the same consistency, as anyone can make by the old way of trying to stir the meal dry into the boiling water. It will lump up and be [illegible]

LOSSES IN YOUNG PIGS.

Why the Percentage of Deaths is [illegible]

It is safe to [illegible] 50 per cent. of the pigs die at birth to the age of ten days. The losses at this period are estimated to be next to those caused by the ravages of cholera. This is frequently followed by another period of losses commencing at weaning time. These losses are generally caused by improper feeding. The corn-fed sow brings small, weakly constituted pigs. The heat produced by too much corn develops fever and pigs die of starvation.

Again, weaning time is a critical period in the life of the pig. By comparison, says Farmers' Review, it has been ascertained that the milk of the sow is about three times richer in fat and twice as rich in sugar of milk as is the milk of the cow. Depriving the pig of rich concentrated food and requiring it to depend on ordinary feed such as corn and grass would be a very violent change. Corn is deficient in ash and protein, and alfalfa is too bulky for supplying these nutrients in the concentrated and efficient form required by pigs. It will pay to feed fresh milk, and skimmilk to the young pigs. Young pigs should be regularly fed, as often as five times a day.

A WELL MAN, AT 81.

The Interesting Experience of an Old Settler of Virginia.

Daniel S. Queen, Burrell Street, Salem, Va., says: "Years ago while lifting a heavy weight a sudden pain shot through one of the kidneys and settled in my back, and after that I was in constant misery from kidney trouble. One spell kept me in bed six weeks. My arms and legs were stiff and I was helpless as a child. The urine was discolored and though I used one remedy after another, I was not helped until I used Doan's Kidney Pills, and I was so bad then that the first box made only a slight change. To-day, however, I am a well man, at 81, and I owe my life and health to the use of Doan's Kidney Pills."

WHAT WINTER WHEAT IS DOING FOR SOUTHERN ALBERTA.

Splendid Crops on the Former Ranching Plains of Canadian West.

That portion of the country in Western Canada formerly recognized as ranching country has developed into one of the most [illegible] in the continent. Yields are quoted running from 30 to 60 bushels to the acre, and giving a return to the farmer of from $25 to $50 per acre. These lands are now selling at from $12 to $20 per acre, and pay well at that figure. H. Howes of Magrath, Alberta, Western Canada, had 50 acres of land in wheat, which averaged 45 bushels to the acre; his yield of oats was 35 bushels. The value to him per acre of wheat was $35.00. J. F. Haycock of the same place, says: "I had 65 acres of wheat, 35 acres of oats and four acres of barley. My average yield of oats to the acre was 80 bushels; wheat—winter—60 bushels and red fife, 32 bushels, and barley, 50 bushels. The value to me per acre was, wheat, $28.00; oats, $32.00, and barley, $24.00." J. P. Bradshaw of Magrath, had 1,030 acres of wheat in crop that averaged 29½ bushels to the acre, his oats, 32 bushels; barley, 53 bushels. He threshed 31,000 bushels of wheat from 540 acres. He also had 250 tons of sugar beets from 25 acres worth $5.62½ per ton. W. S. Sherod, of Lethbridge, says: "I came to Lethbridge from Souris, North Dakota, in April, 1907, having purchased 960 acres of land in this district last fall. I had 128 acres of Alberta Red winter wheat which was put in on breaking in the fall of 1906, which yielded 41½ bushels to the acre, for which I received 87½ cents per bushel, which paid me $36.30 per acre. I had 190 acres "stubbled-in" that is disced in on the stubble, which yielded 22 bushels to the acre at 87½ cents per bushel, which paid me $19.25 to the acre. I also had 350 acres of strictly volunteer crop, which it was intended to prepare in the summer; but when it was seen that it was a good looking crop, it was allowed to go. From this we threshed 15 bushels to the acre, which paid us at the rate of [illegible] per bushel or $13.12 per acre. [illegible] as a whole. I consider that I had a first-[illegible] into consideration the fact of part of the crop having been "stubbled in," and part strictly volunteer (which was never touched at all until the binder was put into it), I consider I had a heavy crop. I might say that I was in North Dakota five years and I never grew as heavy a crop during that time. This is the 25th day of November, and my teams are still ploughing, and, from the appearance of the weather, will be for some time yet." R. W. Bradshaw of Magrath, says: "I had this year 400 acres in crop, viz.: 200 acres [illegible] acres in oats. My average yield of oats to the acre was 50 bushels, and wheat, 22½ bushels. The value to me per acre for wheat was $19.00, and oats, $17.00. The highest price obtained for my grain was for wheat 82 cents per bushel, and $1.05 per hundred for oats. I also had 100 tons of hay worth $12.00 per ton, and will say my wheat was all volunteer this year. Lots of wheat is averaging from 50 to 60 bushels per acre on summer fallow, and on new breaking, when the breaking was done early in the spring." Writing from Spring Coulee, Alberta, [illegible] wheat and 1,000 acres of oats. My [illegible] was 30 bushels and of wheat 35 bushels. The value to me per acre for wheat was $27.00 and for oats $15.00.

WHISKEY FOR RHEUMATISM.

The increased use of whiskey for rheumatism is causing considerable discussion among the medical fraternity. It is an almost infallible cure when mixed with certain other ingredients and taken properly. The following formula is very effective: "To one half pint of good whiskey add one ounce of Toris Root compound and one ounce of Syrup of Sarsaparilla Compound. Take in tablespoonful doses before each meal and before retiring." Toris Root Compound is a product of the laboratories of the Globe Pharmaceutical Co., Dayton, O.

A prominent druggist states he fills this prescription often and has seen its good results. It is surely worth trying by anyone who may be afflicted.

For a number of years a bitter feud had existed betwen the Browns and Perkinses, next door neighbors. The trouble had originated through the depredations of Brown's cat, and had grown so fixed an affair that neither party ever dreamt of "making up." One day, however, Brown sent his servant next door with a peace-making note for Mr. Perkins, which read:

"Mr. Brown sends his compliments to Mr. Perkins, and begs to say that his old cat died this morning."

Perkins' written reply was bitter:

The GIRL from TIM'S PLACE

COPYRIGHT, 1906, BY LOTHROP, LEE & SHEPARD CO.

SYNOPSIS

Chip McGuire, a 16-year old girl living at Tim's place in the Maine woods is sold by her father to Pete Bolduc, a half-breed. She runs away and reaches the camp of Martin Frisbie, [illegible] Raymond Stetson, and guides. She tells her story [illegible] is cared for by Mrs. Frisbie. Journey of [illegible] into woods to visit father of Mrs. Frisbie, an old hermit, who has lived in the wilderness for many years. When camp is broken Chip and Ray occupy same canoe. The party reach camp [illegible] comed by him and Cy Walker, an old friend of Mr. [illegible] stay. Chip and Ray are in love, but no one realizes this but Cy Walker. Strange canoe marks found on lake shore in front of their cabin. Strange smoke is seen across the lake. Martin and Levi leave for settlement to get officers to arrest McGuire, who is known as outlaw and escaped murderer. Chip's one woods friend, Tomah, an Indian, visits camp. Ray believes he sees a bear on the ridge. Chip is stolen by Pete Bolduc and escapes with her in a canoe. Chip is rescued by Martin and Levi as they are returning from the settlement. Bolduc escapes. Old Cy proposes to Ray that he remain in the woods with himself and Amzi and trap during the winter, and he concludes to do so. Others of the party return to Greenvale, taking Chip with them. Chip starts to school in Greenvale, and finds life unpleasant at Aunt Comfort's, made so especially by Hannah. Old Cy and Ray discover strange tracks in the wilderness. They penetrate further into the wilderness and discover the hiding place of the man who had been sneaking about their cabin. They investigate [illegible] Bolduc finds [illegible] and [illegible] to the death finding a [illegible] tonight.

How welcome he was, and how all, even Amzi, of those winter-bound prisoners vied with each other in making him the guest of honor, need not be asserted. He had been a part of their life here the previous summer, with all its joys and dangers, and now seemed one of them.

Thus mutual experiences and their winter's history had been exchanged, of course Chip's rescue, the half-breed's escape, and the whereabouts of her father came up for discussion that evening.

"I've heard from Tim's Place two or three times this winter," said Levi, "an—neither Pete nor [illegible] been seen or heard on since early last fall. Pete got thar all safe, but vowed revenge on McGuire, as Martin and I found, when we went out. He stayed [illegible] Hole, 'n' since then hain't never been seen or heard of by nobody. Tim—Mike went over to his cabin 'long in the winter, but no signs of him was found, or even of his bein' thar since snow came. It was not without incident, for when the main stream was reached it was found with floating ice, and the pole-shod drivers with the barges and spike shoes were in evidence. CHAPTER XVII.

Chip's success and popularity in Greenvale was practically nullified by Hannah, who from wounded vanity and petty jealousy became her enemy from the outset.

Aunt Comfort did not know it. Angie was the [illegible] of the facts, or, busy with her own special duties and home-making, gave them no thought. And yet, instilled by Hannah's [illegible] tongue, Greenvale [illegible] upon poor Chip [illegible] As [illegible] —With Angie [illegible] made Angie [illegible] decided [illegible] to participate [illegible] all the more and raise an uproar of [illegible] sneers.

"[illegible] nobody an' an upstart," Hannah [illegible] the first [illegible] after [illegible] vent, 'an' I've my doubts about her [illegible] an' mother ever bein' married. [illegible] believes in [illegible]

Robbed in Utter Despair.

Injun spirits an' hobgoblin things she calls spites, an' is a regular heathen. I don't trust her a minute, an' never leave the house thout I lock up my things."

There was also some color for this ill repute for Angie had concealed nothing, and Chip, foolishly perhaps, had asserted her belief when it would have been better to conceal it.

The parson also, chagrined at his failure to make a convert of the girl, referred to her as "[illegible]" in her [illegible] and [illegible] charming.

But Hannah's power was beyond [illegible] Aunt Comfort upon her mustering and night whose Angie became provoked her with home, [illegible] to church and much good it did her, for she had fulfilled her [illegible] And in a way she had.

[illegible] Hannah [illegible] Harris [illegible] [illegible] Chip [illegible] would keep on "taking in [illegible] waifs and outcast mortals as long as she lived, or house room held out. And it was true.

By midwinter Martin's new house was all [illegible] began to interest Angie, which made matters all the [illegible] for now Hannah could persecute [illegible] with less danger of exposure.

But Chip was hard to [illegible] She had known adversity in its worst form. Her life at Tim's Place had been practical slavery, and the most that Hannah could do was as pin pricks compared to it.

It is certain, also, if Chip had "spunked up," as Hannah would call it, now and then, it would have been better for [illegible] but it wasn't Chip's way. To work and suffer in silence had been her lot at Tim's Place. Angie had said, "You must obey everybody and make friends," and impelled by [illegible] broad order, Chip was doing her best.

One hope cheered her all that long, hard winter of monotonous study—the return of Ray, and possibly Old Cy, when summer came. Somehow these two had knit themselves into her life as no one else had or could. Then she wondered how Ray would seem to and feel toward her when he came, and if the little bond—a wondrous strong one, as far as her feelings went—would still call him to her side.

It had all [illegible] the [illegible] of [illegible] and how patiently she had [illegible] to correct her own speech, no [illegible] guessed.

[illegible] almost certain that [illegible] tale had won her teacher's interest and affection as naught else could. Only one reservation was made by Chip—her own feelings toward Ray. All else became an open [illegible] to Miss Prudence.

[illegible] school was out, the two walked home together as far as their ways [illegible] and then Chip obtained the one hour of the day which she felt was quite her own. At first during the autumn days she had used it for a solitary ramble in the nutting woods. [illegible] Cattle and it was not too cold, she occasionally visited the mill pond above the village, where, if the conditions were right, all the skating and sliding youth were gathered, and when blessed spring returned, it was away to the hills and dells once more.

On Saturdays she seldom left the house, unless sent on an errand, and Sunday became a day of penance.

And now, when the flowers and birds had once more returned to Greenvale and Ray might return any day, a period on that Chip had had in mind for things worth to take shape. She knew Ray must come on the stage and come for a sight of the face as [illegible] he can make and she meant to be the first to meet and greet him.

At last [illegible] the village street and [illegible] the [illegible] house was a sharp [illegible] The stage [illegible] here about an hour after the close of [illegible] and in the vantage point where she could hide [illegible] Chip [illegible]

Her plans for meeting her young hero were well considered. She was sure he would, like herself, prefer a seat with Uncle Joe. That important person, whose heart she had won by his admiration of his horses on her arrival, would [illegible] village, if he saw her. If he was alone, she would remain hid; but if some one was with him, she would then disclose herself and the coveted invitation and meeting with Ray would follow.

It was mid-April when Chip began her daily watch, and missed no day unless a [illegible] rain prevented. It [illegible] and then one balmy afternoon when she saw the stage afar, there perched beside Uncle Joe, was—a companion!

How sure that weary, waiting waif was that her heart was not mistaken! How her pulses leaped and thrilled as the slow-moving stage crept up the hill; and how Ray, eager to [illegible] the first glimpse of his native village, saw a winsome, smiling face shaded by a flower-decked hat, peeping at him over a wall, was but a minor episode in the lives of these two; yet one to be recalled many, many times afterward and always with a heartache.

None came to them now, for on the instant Ray saw who was waiting for him he halted the stage, and the next moment he was beside his sweetheart. And Uncle Joe, with the wisdom and sympathy of old age, discreetly averted his face, and said "Golang" to his horses, and drove on alone.

CHAPTER XVIII.

During all the long weeks while Chip had awaited her lover's coming, one hope had been hers—that his return would end all her loneliness and begin a season of the happy, care-free days like those by the lake once more.

For the first few moments after he kissed her upraised lips, she could not [illegible] and hand in hand they [illegible] toward the village.

"I've [illegible] simply, "I've counted the days, and [illegible] down here to meet you daily, for over a month. I don't like it here, and [illegible] likes me, I guess. I'm so glad you've come, though. Now I shan't be lonesome no more. I've studied hard, too," she added, with an accent of pride. "I can read and spell words of six syllables. I've ciphered up to decimal fractions, an' begun grammar.

"I'm glad to get home, too," answered Ray, as simply. "It was lonesome in the woods all winter, when we couldn't tend the traps. But I've made a lot of money—most five hundred dollars—all mine, too. How is everybody?" And so they dropped from sentiment into commonplace.

At the tavern he secured his belongings. At the corner where their ways parted, he bade Chip a light good-by, [illegible] with an "I'll see you soon," left her.

[illegible] had [illegible] should [illegible] waiting [illegible] and a [illegible] to fail.

"He will come to-night," her heart assured her, and [illegible] Aunt Comfort, or Hannah, to whom she [illegible] she [illegible] dress and waited his [illegible] visit.

[illegible] ing evening it was. The June night [illegible] the [illegible] of Aunt Comfort's house. Aunt [illegible] call. Hannah was aware at prayer meeting, and "no one nigh to hinder." But Chip waited in vain!

At school next day her mind and heart were at war. The parts of speech and rules of subtraction and division seemed complete chaos, and when homeward bound, she loitered slowly along, hoping Ray would make amends and meet her on the way. But again he failed to appear.

And that night, when alone with Hannah, a worse blow came.

"I heard young Stetson out back [illegible] her [illegible] blue eyes on Chip, 'an you went down the road to meet him. I should think you'd be 'shamed o' yourself. If you're callarin' on settin' your cap for him, 'twon't do a mite o' good. His aunt wouldn't think o' havin' such an outcast as you for him—that I can tell ye."

But not a word of reply came from poor Chip. Such speeches were not new to her, and she had long before ceased to answer them. But this one, from its very truth, hurt more than all others had, and crushed by it, she stole away out of the house.

No thought that Ray might call came to her. She only wished to escape somewhere, that she might cry away her misery and shame in solitude.

The evening was but a repetition of the previous one. The same sweet influence and [illegible] night was all about, but no heed of its beauty came to Chip. Instead, she felt herself a shameful thing of no account. Her lover had failed her—now she knew why, and as she sped along the lonely way to the schoolhouse, scarce conscious of her steps, all here and all [illegible] left her. Why or for what purpose she had hurried to reach this deserted little building, she knew not. Hot tears filled her eyes. Shame surged in her heart. She was a pariah in the eyes of all her world, and once she had reached the room all so often [illegible] her, she threw herself upon it and [illegible]

ANTIQUITY OF BEER

Beer is of great antiquity. It was manufactured first by the Egyptians and afterward by the Greeks, Romans and ancient Gauls. Beer was mentioned by the following ancient writers: Tacitus, Pliny, Xenophon and others. The Romans are supposed to have introduced the brewing of beer or ale, as it was then called, to the Britons, at the time of the latter's conquest of the former. The Britons continued the brewing of barley malt, calling it ale, until about 1524, when the Germans introduced the brewing of hops with the barley malt, calling it bier, or, in English, beer.
